AGNES AYRES ADDED TO LIST OF NOV. 6 STARS

Rotarians Entertain Kiwanis, Exchange Clubs; Brougher Talks

Our City comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

No Cause to Fear Any Decrease in Glendale Property Values.

THERE seems to be an undercurrent of talk in Glendale right now as regards the ever-increasing price of real estate.

It is the same old line of talk which we have heard off and on from the old residenters that present conditions simply can't last.

They then go on to tell of experiences they have gone through in former years when real estate became stagnant. No reason is given to substantiate this belief only their remembrance of what happened in years gone by.

* * *

THERE is no doubt that prices of real estate have been steadily advancing for the last three years, but a study of conditions show good and sufficient reasons for the increase.

During the period of the war conditions were not such as to justify any increase in the prices of real estate, and in fact prices went to a low level. Most every home was represented either at the front or in the training camps, and a good deal of scratching had to be done to "keep the home fires burning."

* * *

AFTER the armistice was signed and enough time had elapsed to stabilize the nation, business conditions changed in all lines of endeavor. Building operations, which had been at a standstill, started picking up, and there was an urgent need for the building of homes.

Supply and demand have been the chief factors in the advancing of prices in California real estate. There could be no more legitimate reason for advancing prices than this. Houses are being sold as fast as they can be built and to a great extent to people who have recently moved to California from some eastern or northern state.

If these individuals who are arriving and talking of a slowing up would accept the fact that the California of today is far different from the California of the past, they would speedily change their opinion.

* * *

BEFORE the war California was looked on throughout the world as a tourist state, which it was, business rushing during the tourist season and being slack in off months.

Factories were scarce, especially in the southern part of the state. This condition of affairs does not exist today. We have many factories and they are being added to daily at such a rate as to cause worry as to where locations can be found for them.

We still have our tourists, but quite a large percentage of them eventually move here and our season has spread so as to take in all months of the year.

California was and still is called the "white spot." We can see no reason for this appellation not being justified today as much as yesterday.

* * *

IF the person who holds the opinion that prices on real estate are high in Glendale would take a trip around Los Angeles and price either residential or business property which is located as close to the Los Angeles city hall as is Glendale, he will find that prices here are still low.

We know of no convincing argument to show any reason for the value of Hollywood property being any higher than ours. We can match them in any class they may wish to compare and show quite a margin of difference as to price.

Glendale's future is assured. Nothing can stop her growth. If a slowing up should occur in California, Glendale, on account of her location, would be among the very last to be affected.

Let's forget all talk of what used to be, and boost for the Glendale which must be.

ROTARIANS HOSTS TO EXCHANGE AND KIWANIS CLUB-ERS

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher Makes An Optimistic Address

"Any man who develops the faculties that God has given him to the greatest possible extent will make a success of life."

This was the keynote of the address entitled "Keys and Keyholes" which was given before the Rotary, Kiwanis and Exchange clubs who gathered at the Tuesday Afternoon club at noon today, by Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of the Temple Baptist church of Los Angeles. The occasion was the entertainment of the Kiwanis and Exchange clubs by the Rotary club of this city.

Dr. Brougher continued:

"One of the greatest things in this life is to learn to live happily with your fellow men. If you don't learn this you are out of the game.

"Man's nature is made up of four distinct sections or features—physical, mental, spiritual and moral. That's why he is so hard to reach. If he had only one of these attributes you could reach him with ease—but where there are four it is not so easy.

"To appeal to some folks you have to hit them on the nose—others are reached through an intellectual channel. If a fellow wants to settle every question with his fists, that proves that he is living in the physical sphere.

"Most men are lopsided—they have one or two of these attributes but totally ignore the others. The preacher must have the physical side of his nature developed just as much as the storekeeper, the lawyer or the doctor should have his spiritual needs taken care of.

"The merchant who leaves God out of his life is just as greatly handicapped as the preacher who neglects the physical side of his nature. It is the fellow who can use all of his faculties to the highest degree who attains success. He is the well-rounded-out man.

"You have no right to be sick, mentally, physically or spiritually. Who wants to do business with a fellow who is constantly whining about how he feels? Doing business with a man who is constantly growling about how he feels and telling you how sick he is is too much like taking advantage of an invalid. You owe it to yourself to be healthy and robust in all of your faculties. Every man should be mentally and spiritually active just as much as he should be physically robust and healthy.

"The keynote of all of the organizations represented here today is service in one way or another. You are aiming at the upbuilding of yourselves, your organizations and the city in which you live. I tell you it really is the man who serves the most who actually receives the most.

"You must adapt yourself to the thing you have to do—for the accomplishment you are aiming to perform. You must believe in that thing with all your might, and you must have something that is really worth while.

"The world will not stand for a man who delivers his wares with a grouch. Such a fellow is his own worst enemy. Whether you are selling religion or shoes or dry-goods you must deliver your goods with a smile. Smile when you get up in the morning and continue smiling all day. It will help you as well as assisting to sell your goods. A constant smile makes the world brighter. Every man is a salesman, regardless of whether he works in a law office, a pulpit or a store. You must put good cheer into things that generally are monotonous. You must put sunshine into your everyday life.

"Men, you should concentrate on a great purpose in life. What is your purpose? If I should ask each one of you separately what your purpose in life is would you answer as did the Irishman when asked the same question? He said 'I dig ditches to get money to gain strength to dig ditches.' Are you going around a ring? Do you make headway? Aim high. Have a lofty objective and work constantly toward that end. A beautiful motto is that of the Boy Scouts' organization — 'Do some kind act to someone daily without a thought of reward.' You can't beat that motto. Take that as a keynote of your life.

"You should not sneer at the man who is mentally, physically or spiritually blind. Help him up. Do something for him. We all should help rather than criticise."

ROUTS ASSAILANT WITH TOY PISTOL; MAN IS FINED $100

Dr. Frederick W. Keeler was the principal in an interesting case in psychology in which his quickness of wit may have saved his life and also, perhaps, the necks of two intoxicated men who attacked him between Sunland and Tujunga. The assailants were Peter Martin of Los Angeles and Charles Miller of the same city. The assault occurred October 20 and the doctor held them off with a child's toy pistol such as sells for 25 cents. It closely resembled the real thing, however. They were brought before Judge Harry W. Chase Tuesday and Peter Martin was fined $100 for being drunk, for swearing in the presence of women and for assaulting Dr. Keeler. His companion, Charles Miller, who was charged with assault and with driving while intoxicated, was released on a $600 cash bond which was deposited.

Another big meeting was held by the Mutual Benefit Reading Circle Wednesday at the city library, not less than 50 being present. The organization seems to have developed new enthusiasm and additions to the enrollment are made every session, the roster now numbering about 135. The new chairman, Mrs. H. V. Henry, presided, and the reading of the current book, "Education in Play," by Lee, was continued. Mrs. Clark Johnson reviewed two excellent articles on "Honesty," by William Bryan Forbush, which were the subject of some discussion. During a brief business session $5 was voted for the relief fund for families of men who lost their lives in the mountain fire. The circle also voted to have a sale of homemade cake at the next session to replenish its treasury.

STILL TALKING SAN FERNANDO ROAD WIDENING

At the Conference Today, Width of 66 to 70 Feet Favored

The conference held this morning in the office of Hush Pomeroy, head of the city planning commission of Los Angeles by representatives of the Glendale city council, other city officials, San Fernando road property owners and members of the Board of Supervisors, revealed unanimity of sentiment on the widening of San Fernando. Though the preferred width was not decided upon, the preponderance of opinion favored 66 to 70 feet. At the present time it varies from 50 to 80 feet.

The subject is to be further threshed out at a meeting of the San Fernando boulevard improvement association to be held tonight in the office of Lloyd Wilson at San Fernando and Central, at which Mr. Pomeroy, and others present at the morning conference will be in attendance. Mr. Pomeroy recommends that property owners confer with the Glendale city engineer and secure from him a working plan and estimate of cost of the widening to be spread over a large assessment district, and that recommendation as well as means by which the thoroughfare could be widened will come in for discussion tonight.

CLUB SECTION REVIEWS AMERICAN HISTORY

The citizenship and legislative section of the Tuesday Afternoon club, of which Miss Ida Myers is curator and Mrs. L. E. Richardson secretary, had its first meeting Wednesday afternoon at the club house and began the review of American history and study of the constitution of the United States as provided in its program. Mrs. Richardson made a fine talk on Christopher Columbus, dwelling on his courage and steadfastness of purpose during the perilous voyage of 71 days which ended in his discovery of the new world. Miss Myers likewise gave a splendid talk on the events which led to the drafting of the constitution, emphasizing the preamble as a wonderful composition. The interesting discussion which followed was continued over the tea and wafers served at the close of the meeting and all present felt they had participated in a very profitable session. At the next meeting, to be held the second Wednesday in November, the study of the constitution will be continued with talks on George Washington, Alexander Hamilton and Benjamin Franklin.

BIG APARTMENT HOUSE AT 308 N. CENTRAL

Wilbur S. Bear Is the Man Behind the Big Project

Actual construction work will start in a few days on a three-story 32-room apartment house to cost at least $100,000 at 308 North Central avenue. This will be erected by Wilbur S. Bear, a recent arrival in Glendale from Madison, Wis.

The preparing of the ground for this structure began this morning. Previous to this the seven-room house, which was disposed of to a local contractor, was removed from the site.

This apartment house will cover a ground space of 50x165 feet and will be of Spanish type architecture. The excavation of the basement, which will be used for storage space for cars of the occupants of the building, is now going on.

This building will be strictly up to the minute. Every feature that could possibly add to the comfort of the guests is being included. Each room will have a private phone, latest refrigeration and heating devises and the like.

In this structure will be 60 single and 20 double apartments, all of which will be furnished in strictly modern style.

Mr. Bear, who resides at 220 North Central avenue, is a firm believer in Glendale. He sees nothing but advancement for this town.

"Nothing can hold Glendale back," he said this morning.

HOLLYWOOD MAN THROWS KNIFE, KILLS ASSAILANT

[By Associated Press]

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 25.—E. J. Hoff, architect of Seattle, Wash., was killed instantly today in an altercation with Harry Winters, cafe owner, in the rear of the cafe, when the restaurant man threw a butcher knife at Hoff, according to a statement at police headquarters. Winters was arrested on a manslaughter charge. Hoff, who has been living at the Savoy Hotel, Oakland, Calif., for the past two months, leaves a wife and two children in Seattle, the police said.

According to the report made to the police, the driver of the automobile had parked his car for repairs in front of Winters' cafe. Winters protested and the man attacked him with a screw driver, then dropped that and started after the restaurant keeper with a starting crank.

As his assailant advanced, Winters ran into his kitchen, picked up a butcher knife with a twelve-inch blade and threw it. The knife plunged into the man's side and he dropped dead.

BARLING BOMBER BREAKS WEIGHT-ALTITUDE RECORD

[By Associated Press]

DAYTON, Ohio., Oct. 25.—A weight carrying altitude record was established at Wilbur Wright field today when the Barling bomber, world greatest airplane, rose to an indicated distance of 6300 feet, carrying a gross load of 33,750 pounds.

Piloted by Lieutenant Harold R. Harris, the huge craft, loaded with 4,530 pounds of bombs, 2,400 pounds of gasoline and the weight of the three men in the plane totaling 540 pounds, left the earth after a short run of 15.4 seconds. It was in the air one hour, 45 minutes and 30 seconds.

After landing Lieutenant Harris declared that a greater altitude could have been reached but the ship was brought to earth because of the fatigue of the flyers.

GENERAL COURT MARTIAL ORDERED FOR NAVAL MEN

[By Associated Press]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Inquiry by the navy department to fix responsibility for the loss of seven destroyers and a score of men off Honda, Calif., last September 8, entered a more serious phase today with Secretary Denby's order for the immediate convening of a general court martial to try 11 naval officers on duty with the squadron.

The secretary's order that the court convene at once for the trial at San Diego was issued yesterday on the recommendation of 9dmiral S. S. Robinson, commander-in-chief of the battle fleet. The recommendation was based on the findings of the court of inquiry which has been probing the cause of the disaster, characterized by naval officers as the "greatest peace-time blow ever sustained by the United States navy."

A squadron commander, two division commanders, the flotilla navigator and the seven commanders of the destroyers which crashed on the rocks while running through a fog at 20 knots during a practice cruise, faced trial in what is the largest single court martial in the history of the navy.

That the trial, however, does not necessarily imply that all of the officers have been held responsible for the loss of the destroyers was emphasized in Secretary Denby's announcement. The trial was ordered, he said, as much to give them an opportunity to clear their records as to fix responsibility for the crash.

AND HERE ARE THE SONGS THEY SANG

Three Clubs Vie With Each Other in Soulful Singing

The Kiwanis and Exchange clubs of Glendale were guests of the Rotary at the Glendale Tuesday Afternoon club. Dr. J. Whitcome Brougher, pastor of the Temple Baptist church of Los Angeles, was the principal speaker. Following are the club songs that were featured on this occasion:

KIWANIS

Come all good fellows and work lay aside,
Come where good cheer and Kiwanis abide,
Come now and sip of the good fellowship that is waiting there—
Come where the spirit fills all heart's desire.
Come where good fellows to heights all aspire,
Come now and hear in a song ringing clear on the blithesome air,
Kiwanis! Kiwanis! Good fellows meet today—
Kiwanis! Kiwanis! Drive all our cares away—
Kiwanis! Kiwanis! Yours is the spirit free—
Kiwanis! Drown all our glooms in the deep blue sea.

EXCHANGE CLUB

Unity, unity, service for us all.
Glendale first, Glendale last, and Glendale for us all.
Pick it up, boost it up,
Make it jump and pop—
U. S. A for all of us
And GLENDALE on the top!

ROTARY

I know a club where peace abides,
Where fellowship holds sway,
Where smile meets smile and handshake,
Helps cheer life on its way.
Our band of men is chosen,
And each must play his part,
That the drama we call "Rotary"
Will be played with all our heart.

Chorus:

Oh Rotary, Oh Rotary,
Our motto calls to you,
"He profits most who serves the best," and to fellowship is true;
Oh Rotary, Oh Rotary,
Preach faith and cheer and love;
Remember loyal service
Makes the blue sky shine above.

Just Off the Wire From Here and There

[By Associated Press]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 25.—A dozen or more house members forcibly attacked Representative Callahan, smashed a chair and threw Callahan out of the room when he declared in a bitter arraignment of the Ku Klux Klan just before the noon recess today, that N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the Klan, was dictating the kind of legislation to be enacted in Oklahoma.

Callahan's words had hardly fell in the house chamber before one member shouted, "That's a black lie." One member sprang at Callahan's throat and both fell on the floor in a scuffle. Twelve or 15 other members rushed toward Callahan, most of them endeavoring to place their hands on him. Sergeants at arms and virtually all other members of the house rushed to the corner where the scuffle was taking place. Clenched fists were waving in the air as Callahan was forcibly ejected into a cloak room just outside the house chamber. Callahan stood guarded by two members after the sergeant at arms had ordered both members back into the chamber.

CLUB ROUND TABLE SECTION GIVES LUNCHEON

Sight reading, memorizing and ear training were a few of the topics taken up for discussion at the regular luncheon meeting of the Music Teachers' Roundtable section of the Glendale Music club held Wednesday noon at the Egyptian Village cafe with Mrs. Eva Cunningham, curator, presiding. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by the secretary, Mrs. Grace Jackson, she announced that Mrs. Nathan Rigdon has asked that all music teachers send in the names of all pupils over fifteen years of age as being eligible for membership in the junior auxiliary of the Glendale Music club. The music teachers were also asked to send in topics that they would like to have discussed at the Roundtable meetings to Mrs. Jackson.

Mrs. L. N. Hagood discussed the subject of "Sight Reading," stating "pupils should be able to read music just as easily and readily as they read books. The main difficulty is that they do not finger properly. Duet playing is especially good to help them in sight reading." Miss Seigler of the high music department also joined in this discussion. Mrs. Whiting spoke of the importance of sight reading in vocal work. Mrs. Lillian Smits discussed the subject of "Memorizing," in which Mrs. Eva Cunningham and Miss Campbell also joined. "The person not talented at memorizing should divide a piece into themes and memorize a theme at a time," she stated. Mrs. Russell took up the subject of "Ear Reading."

All of the music teachers in Glendale are invited to take advantage of the luncheon meetings of the Teachers' Roundtable, which are held at noon the fourth Wednesday of every month.

WONDERFUL TALK BY DENMAN ON HONDURAS

So interesting was the talk given at the regular meeting of the travel section of the Tuesday Afternoon club on Wednesday morning by Mark A. Denman on "Honduras" that he was requested to continue his talk at the next regular meeting of the section. Mr. Denman will go into further details and touch on his subject from a different angle at that time, according to Mrs. Mabel Franklin Ocker, curator of the section.

No Show at Glendale Theater Last Night

Audiences at the Glendale theater suffered a disappointment and practiced involuntary economy Wednesday night when their money was returned or they were told there would be no show. Cause? Failure of electric juice to furnish power for moving picture machine because a transformer in a high power city line had blown out. The lights were on and the audience was seated waiting for the show to begin. At 7:30, when the cause of the trouble was run down, the box receipts were returned to the ticket buyers. City employes at once got busy as soon as the blowout was discovered, but not until 9:40 was the power again available and then it was too late for a show. It was a big loss, as the picture, "The Fog," was a popular one and of the greater interest here because Louise Dresser is in the cast. As usual, Bill Howe, the manager, takes it philosophically.

Mrs. Whiting had become all at once exceedingly popular in the select suburb which she honored with her abiding presence. The reason for the large number dropping in was that a new family had just moved into the next house to Mrs. Whiting, and they were all anxious to learn full particulars as to number of beds, size of dining-room suite and so on.

"What kind of people are those who have just moved in next door to you?" asked Mrs. Codding, the eighth caller on Tuesday morning.

"Oh, I never talk about my neighbors!" replied Mrs. Whiting, with obvious pride in keeping herself to herself. "All I know about them is that their stuff came in one van, that only one of their bedsteads has any brass on it, most of the furniture looks old, there's six in the family, the children are all girls, they have two dogs, the man is about twenty years older than the woman, they had a squabble with the driver of the van when they settled with him and their name is Beach. But really I didn't notice them much. I am always too busy."

Just Chatter

By JOHN J. MULLIGAN

She was very tiny and chubby and sweet, about three or four I should say, and I found her last evening in the twilight running frantically around the front lawn of her house calling in a shrill little voice of fear and anxiety to her kitty, "Here kitty, here Kitty, come puss, come puss," she was saying in such a pathetic little tone of voice, that I slowed my hurrying steps and told her not to worry for together we'd hunt for Kitty. I asked the cat's name and she said he was just a baby cat and she hadn't named him yet, but he was very cunning and she loved him dearly even though he did run away from his mama. And she wanted to know if I didn't think it was silly for a baby cat to run away from a nice home and mama and everything and, of course, I said it was, but that I didn't think he really meant to leave for good but was just taking a little walk somewhere. She seemed quite happily satisfied with this explanation and as we searched the lawn and in and around the porch she kept calling, "Here Kitty, here Kitty," and even as she called who crawled up behind her purring contentedly but baby cat himself, and I never saw anyone so happy. She grabbed the tiny ball of fur in her arms and almost choked it with caresses, the while she told me that even though he didn't have a regular name, he understood her just the same when she called him Kitty, and she thought she'd just name him just that, or puss.

And as she stood there bubbling with joy, kid cat in her arms, I just couldn't resist the temptation, so I caught them both and squeezed them tightly, 'til she grunted "ugh" and Kitty squeaked "meow."

A table built on console lines, but finished in Chinese lacquer in black and gold, is small enough and dainty enough to fit in almost any room.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION AT WHITTIER SOON

Church school workers from all over Southern California are thinking of Whittier these days. The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Southern California Church School Council of Religious Education will be held in Whittier Friends' church November 7, 8, 9. All of Southern California will be represented. The Protestant forces of Southern California are united to fight spiritual illiteracy. It is expected that 5000 persons will attend the sessions of this convention. The program, according to Hugh C. Gibson, general secretary, is the strongest the committee has ever offered. This convention represents the strongest and most effective gathering held in the state in the interest of educational and evangelistic activity of the Christian church.

The program provides for every phase of activity from the most thoroughly organized city school to the smallest one in the rural district. Sixty or more outstanding Sunday school workers are to have part and place on the program.

The one person who will feature the program is Dr. Hugh S. Magill, the new International general secretary. He is a great speaker and a great leader. He was a member of the Illinois Senate 1911 to 1914. He was field secretary for the National Education association, January, 1918, to August, 1922. During that time he increased the membership of the National Education association from 10,000 to more than 100,000. He has a passion for a continental co-operative program. He is recognized as a leader of the religious movement among the Evangelical people of the continent.

No serious-minded pastor, parent or Sunday school teacher or officer can afford to miss his three-day school for leadership in Christian education.

"No, I shall never shine in society," confided a bashful young man to a friend. "I never seem to be able to say the right thing to women.

"Yesterday I met a woman I had not seen for years and I could see that she was making every effort to keep young. So I thought I'd do my bit toward making her feel happy, by saying gracefully:

"You carry your age remarkably well, Miss Owen."

"Instantly I could see that I was in wrong. Her expression changed from mirth to ulterior darkness, so I said:

"Don't mind my little jokes, Anna—I never mean what I say. As a matter of fact, you don't carry your age a bit well."

"And then she very nearly annihilated me with a look and sailed away. Now, just how should I have put it?"

WHEN CITIZENS ARE AROUSED

The organization of citizens in Los Angeles, known as the Crime Commission, has more than vindicated itself. It came into being because of the indignation over frequent acts of robbery and violence, and the ease with which the perpetrators escaped justice. Its purpose was to assist the police in catching rogues, and to assist the courts in disposing of them. For years the judicial processes had been marked by delay, a large part of this ascribed to technicalities that were wholly without merit. The policy of the lawyers who specialize in bringing about the acquittal of the guilty was to postpone the day of trial to the latest date possible. Then the trial often was nothing but a game of wits. Preliminary to the trial there would be a hearing in a lower tribunal, the fixing of bond, often inadequate, and frequently permitting the escape of the prisoner. No wonder the public grew weary of such ineffectiveness.

Recently four robbers were sentenced to prison for long terms one week after the robbery. The next day they were on their way to the penitentiary. The mere showing of the evidence on which the indictments against them had been based was sufficient to make each admit his guilt. How different all this was from the usual method is apparent. Under the system as it operated before an aroused public had injected vitality into it, this quartette would not have faced trial for months. Meanwhile essential witnesses would have disappeared, interest would have died down, and in the end, conviction have been doubtful.

In more than one community there has been proof that the way to check crime is to punish the criminal quickly and severely, and to cut out the quibbling nonsense.

NOT A DEBATABLE QUESTION

Mayor Dever of Chicago is making a valiant effort to enforce prohibition. In a recent interview he said "The question of whether the laws shall be enforced is not debatable." This is the only rightful view. To express it required some courage on the part of the mayor, nevertheless. To be right is not always to be popular.

Laws may be debated. The citizen is fully privileged to hold an opinion as to every piece of legislation on the statute books. He may say that the statute is not good public policy; he may proclaim that it has injured his business, interfered with his liberty. He may go further, asserting that it ought to be repealed. All right. Nobody stops him. If he is able to win a majority over to his opinion, then this majority is at liberty to express its will, modifying or repealing whatever it deems objectionable.

For the citizen to hold vociferously that a law duly enacted cannot and should not be enforced, is for him to go beyond his prerogatives. When he says it cannot be enforced, the great probability is that he means he does not want it enforced. This is no reason for non-enforcement. Individual opinion has to yield to collective opinion. The latter favored a prohibition law, and it favors the enforcement of that law.

To say that the law cannot be enforced, after it has become so strongly the expression of the public will as to have been embodied in the constitution, is to attack the constitution, by seeking to stamp it as weak and ineffective.

The case is that of Society vs. the Bootlegger. And the defendant can't pack the jury.

THE FREQUENT PANACEA

Ever eager for health, with an instinctive desire to attain old age, mankind always has been prolific in production of the dupes of baseless hope. The man with a cure for disease, with a certain recipe for longevity, has only to announce his project, to acquire a following. As a rule his device, process, system, whatever he may call it, is worthless. The panacea cures nothing. The old age recipe fails to add to the period of human existence. The creator of the recipe, likely as not, dies in his prime. For the comfort of the credulous a new remedy is furnished forth with great acclaim, and frustrated desire once more blossoms into hope, soon subjected to blight. Regularly this program is repeated; new pretenders, fresh gudgeons.

A favored scheme of the cure-anything folk, is to tell each applicant, after solemn examination, that he is full of some deadly malady. The fact that he has no trace of the malady in question never seems to be brought to his attention. So he is doped and manipulated and analyzed, a succession of fat fees marking the course, until his money is exhausted. Just then the pseudo healer makes the cheering discovery that the hateful ailment has been banished, and the patient is as good as new. Sometimes there dawns upon the patient a realization that he has been played for a good thing, but generally he retains a serene faith in the confidence operator who has victimized him.

When a doctor, not of high profession standing, emerges from obscurity to declare that he can cure this or that, let him immediately cure this or that. If he fails, then the world knows what he is. But as the world has been finding this out, the doctor has been winning the pile he sought, and he doesn't care.

RFPORTERS MADE SAD

German reporters recently visited the cruiser Pittsburg in the harbor at Danzig. Doubtless they saw much of interest, but the commissionary department was the feature that seemed most striking to them. They did not write of armament or official personnel. Their attention was held by the kitchen, the food, and the manner of serving it. They were astonished and saddened to see a lot of white bread thrown overboard, this being a quantity left after the noonday meal of the crew. "It was the first white bread most of us had seen in years," said one reporter.

Volumes have been written about the waste in American homes, and with possible exaggeration, generally the truth has been told. It is common to see the assertion that a French family could live on the amount that an American family wastes.

The war was supposed to have inculcated a reign of economy. There was a time then when the garbage can did not disclose anything that could have been eaten. People learned to take on their plates no more than could be consumed. Doubtless the habits set up by war-time shortages abide with many American families yet. Nor is it true that all families in this country are, or ever have been, reckless in relation to the table. They purchase in such amount, and stuff of such character, that all of it may be utilized. They perhaps are less astute than the French in this regard, but they mean well.

There is much talk concerning government economy. The spectacle of bread's being tossed into the sea, is not in consonance with such talk. Stale bread, as every cook knows, may be employed in the composition of palatable and nutritious dishes. By reasonably careful management in the household, or in the battleship, there need be no occasion for saddening hungry people by casting away wholesome food. No wonder the German reporters, familiar with short rations, looked at the destruction as wanton, and felt depressed.

Thirty-seven were granted citizenship at a recent session of the federal court. It is interesting to notice the elements that thus come out of the melting pot. Twelve of the number were British. Italy was next with five, then Russia with four. Poland and France contributed three each; Hungary, Sweden and Germany, three each; Czecho-Slovakia, Lithuania, Rumania and Denmark, one apiece. Of different origins and training, the chances are that all will be good Americans.

Is the Human Body Immoral?

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

That impresses you at first as a stupid question and you answer as you read it:

"Of course NOT."

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

Let's agree then that there is primarily and of necessity nothing wrong in the human body. Then why have we such a horror of it? Why not try to get used to it and treat it as we treat other natural phenomena?

Before me are two clippings that seem to prove that Americans are unable to do so simple and natural a thing as to treat natural facts naturally. A group of employers in the east have ordered their women employes not to wear sleeveless gowns to work, though we all know that sleeveless gowns at this special time are strictly au fait.

Are they harmful to morals. They are NOT. In Persia where women have for centuries veiled their faces it is a disgrace to appear with the features uncovered. We think the Persians are silly and tyranical because of this, but we somehow feel that the American business men who ordered their clerks and stenographers and private secretaries to cover their arms are in some obscure fashion protecting the morals of the community.

Which shows how silly people can be when they give their entire attention to interpreting everything unusual as a stealthy approach to immorality.

The next clipping is worse. It relates that a board of censors, who seem to be as brainless as the average run of censors, have in Chicago ordered out sections of the moving pictures made by the Roosevelt expedition in the jungles of South America because the natives had been filmed in the only "costumes" they had ever known, their own private and individual skins.

All savages go naked; and they would be amazed to learn that there is anything wrong in the custom.

We presume that the Chicago censors will in the interest of mortality collect a few near-savages, have them gowned in Mother Hubbards and run in the substitute film footage as a true and uplifting picture of the native South Americans.

By all means let us be moral, even if it makes of us ignoramuses, hypocrites and tyrants. Sometimes it seems a pity that God failed to bestow upon us a coat of feathers or fur; but if he had the censors would have declared the decorations immoral, because natural.

As it is the human skin is the most immoral thing in the world—except the censorial mind.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Doc Henneberry says he is opposed to the prevalent practise of referring to members of the human race as fools. Not many of us, he says, are real, meritorious, Grade A fools. Usually we merely do not know much about ourselves.

"There were three years of my young life," says Doc, "when I bore the reputation in the Henry county bar of being afflicted by ingrowing hair on my cranium. Just because I was trying to read law to please my father instead of studying medicine to please myself. My head is not geared for law work, and that's that."

Henneberry got to talking this way because young Sam Carson had just passed by. Young Sam is so called because his father is Old Sam Carson. Four or five years ago Young Sam came in to see Doc. He said that he was pretty nearly discouraged with life. He was listless, he said, and tired, and there were days when his mind simply did not work at all.

"I'm silly by spells," he said. "Yes, sir. There are days when I'm as mush-minded as any moron you ever trapped in a swamp. All I want to do is to lie around and sleep. I actually do not understand all that people say to me. It's almost as though I were doped."

Doc brought him around by reading out of Boswell's life. Samuel Johnson was the intellectual light of his day. He was so great that the life written by Boswell made the writer famous. Yet Johnson had those soft, sappy, dead, foolish days himself. To the end of his life he regarded himself as next door to madness. Because there were days and days when he did not have driving force enough to lift his eyelids he became melancholic. At such times he seemed half-baked, thick, almost silly.

"Now go out and get a reputation," said Doc Henneberry to Young Sam. "Don't let your off days bother you. When you cannot think, do not think. That's an easy prescription."

Young Sam's good days have come often enough lately to win him success.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

CHAPTER XII

One party of five men, a mine official and employes who remained loyal to their employers, was ambushed on a road out of Walsenburg. Four were killed. A number of arrests were made, but after the accused men had been in jail for some months, they were tried in another county and went free. Nobody was punished for any of the murders and assassinations, beyond the fact that a few men spent a little time in jail.

JAMES W. FOLEY

It is peaceful and quiet enough now, but it is safe to say no thinking persons in this section of the state want to see a repetition of that reign of terror that held the attention of the entire United States for the time being. The union that called the strike gained nothing. Many men lost their lives and women and children as well. The coal companies suffered great losses in property and the lives of faithful employes. The mines were not unionized.

With the coming of the federal troops work was gradually resumed and there has been no further attempt of the same kind to unionize the mines. There is no "check-off" system in these mines and no dealing with officials of the unions. The dealing is with the men through their industrial representatives and while no system is perfect this one is working out well, with prospects of better understanding as time goes on.

* * *

On the Memorial day when the monument was dedicated John D. Rockefeller Jr., was in Trinidad. He expressed the deepest sympathy for the families of those who had perished in the tent colony tragedy and told the members of his party that he wanted to go out to the dedication and tell the people from the platform that had been erected to hold the speakers and guests, that he sympathized with them in the death of these women and children, innocent sufferers of the conflict. The Colorado Fuel and Iron company is a Rockefeller property and the strike was waged with the utmost bitterness against them.

Naturally the feeling among union miners had been inflamed against anything bearing the name of Rockefeller. Notwithstanding the objections of mine officials and those who understood something of the temper of men inflamed by incendiary speeches and exhortations against capital and its representatives, Rockefeller with McKenzie King, now premier of Canada, drove out to the monument and stepped into the edge of the great crowd there assembled.

King took Rockefeller's card to the platform, gave it to the master of ceremonies, and explained that Mr. Rockefeller was in the crowd and wanted an opportunity to speak and express his sympathy for the loss of women and children. After talking the matter over with other union officials and leaders the request was refused. King was told that there were some pretty bad men in the crowd and there was no telling what might happen if John D. Rockefeller Jr. should appear on the platform.

And it is true that there might have been a tragedy again if he had. But he had the courage of a good American citizen to make his request to be heard, even though the leaders of the union admitted the result might be tragedy. So the Rockefeller party entered their cars and drove away and the officials of the company were accordingly relieved when that happened.

* * *

Fair treatment, co-operation, assistance, human sympathy, recognition of the rights of the miners, industrial conferences, the fair adjustment of differences—all these things have brought about a state of good feeling between miners and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company at the present day.

There is no discrimination against union miners who want to work. But all men are employed on the same basis, whether union or non-union. There is a pension system by which men are retired after thirty years' service at a pay rate equal to a third of the average pay for the preceding ten years. There is a hospital at Pueblo, the Minnequa, brought to its present state of efficiency by Dr. R. W. Corwin, a very remarkable man, who has been forty-one years in the medical service of the company.

The hospital ranks with the finest in the west, or in the country anywhere. There employes of the company and their families are cared for in case of sickness or accident. Many a broken man has been made whole again, many a sufferer relieved and many a sick man made well with all that medical skill, good nursing and human sympathy can do. It is a splendid institution and some of those who preach the heartlessness of corporations should see it and see what work is being done there. No wealthy patient at the most exclusive hospital could have better care than the sick or injured coal miner who is brought to Minnequa. Tros Tyriusque mihi nullo discrimine agetur. I think I remember that much Latin and it fits here.

Songs of the Poets

The Maiden and the Lily—By John Fraser (1750-1811)

A lily in my garden grew
Amid the thyme and clover;
No fairer lily ever blew,
Search all the wide world over.
Its beauty passed into my heart:
I know 'twas very silly,
But I was then a foolish maid,
And it—a perfect lily.

One day a learn-ed man came by,
With years of knowledge laden,
And him I questioned with a sigh,
Like any foolish maiden:—
"Wise sir, please tell me wherein lies—
I know the question's silly—
The something that my art defies,
And makes a perfect lily."

He smiled, then bending plucked the flower,
Then tore it, leaf and petal,
And talked to me full half an hour,
And thought the point to settle:—
"Therein it lies" at length he cries;
And I—I know 'twas silly—
Could only weep and say, "But where—
O doctor, where's my lily?"

PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

EVERYONE knows that the attempt to do away with war, reduce the size of national armaments, establish a League of Nations or International Court, or any such thing, is entirely impractical. People who advocate such things do not reckon with human nature. It is well-known that human nature cannot thrive, except on a diet of raw, bloody meat. That unless we get out and kill one another about every twenty years, batter down the buildings we have erected, and plow up with cannon balls the fields we have cultivated, we cannot remain true, red-blooded, Americans, or otherwise good patriots. The point is that we must keep matter of national honor in our own hands. We must be ready to fight anybody, any time, any where, otherwise we are mollycoddles, and milk-sops, or even worse—pacifists.

This practical, hard-headed, common sense program was carried out the other day by Mrs. Emily Strutynsky, the wife of a Greek Catholic priest, at Ramey, Pennsylvania. It seems that Mrs. Strutynsky thought that the Rev. Basil Stetsuk, a Greek Catholic, had slandered her husband.

Mrs. Strutynsky might have gone to law, but that would have been on the level with appealing to the League of Nations, or she might have paid no attention to the matter, but that would have been still more absurd; that would have been sheer Christianity which, of course, would never work.

Consequently she did the only thing that a self-respecting woman can do. She went to the church where the Rev. Stetsuk was officiating, knelt before him as if for confessional, whipped out a revolver and shot him half a dozen times.

In this act, Mrs. Strutynsky followed exactly the reasoning that governs the nations in their dealings with each other, exactly the reasoning that induces nations to keep up the old rotten system of insuring safety by huge armaments.

There is no more reason for a nation taking the law into its own hands and shooting up another one than there was for Mrs. Strutynsky doing the same thing.

Of course, the world cannot be made to see this for the simple reason that the world is insane. That is, it does not think, but is impelled by certain strong irresistible delusions. These delusions are rooted in antiquity.

In time we will doubtless grow out of them. In time a generation will certainly arise that shall look with amazement upon the declarations of statesment today, and shall wonder why it is that after the military preparedness bunk has been tried for five thousand years and failed every time, people are still putting their faith in it, and why it is so difficult for the people to see that the only feasible and practical preparedness lies in the direction of some sort of League of Nations, or its equivalent.

Meanwhile, all honor to Mrs. Strutynsky! No tomfoolery of arbitration for her. For her the word "honor" meant something. Medals should be struck with her face on them, and should be distributed among all those who are helping to combat the silly, impractical, and vicious idea of a League of Nations.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

The public service department of Los Angeles laid waste the playgrounds that for many years had been used by the children of the southern end of the city. Many expensive improvements had been made, much costly paraphernalia installed, much beauty created and nurtured.

The men of the public service department appeared early one morning and used the tools of destruction so rapidly that no opportunity was given for legal interference, or for any stay of the ravagement.

It seems that the area was desired for storage of pipes. All about there is much acreage not devoted to any present use. A stack of iron pipe might rest as comfortably on a barren space as on one that had been highly improved.

The community about Los Angeles does not criticize the public service department of that city in a general way. It understands that the department is entitled to credit for much that it has done. The community will withhold approval, however, from the devastation wrought at these playgrounds, the hardship forced on hundreds of children, the utter wastage of the large sums devoted to an excellent purpose, the effacement of a comely and useful institution.

The grounds had been lent for the benefit of the children. The method of collecting the loan is objectionable enough to wipe out the gratitude that otherwise might have been due.

Whatever is to be the fate of Germany, it is plain that the great dream of Bismarck was not destined to remain real. The astounding fact is that the structure he reared had remained so long before there came the day for it to crumble.

Shrewdly as Bismarck laid the plans, power was stricken from him by the young kaiser. Even in the youth of the kaiser there was suspicion that he was unbalanced. Yet so near the verge of incompetency, under him Germany remained a unit. He had some statesmen about him who were wise of their kind. There was no Bismarck among them.

Last Sunday there were thirty-four automobiles stolen in the streets of Los Angeles.

Machines thus taken are supposed to be sent quickly out of the state. Evidently somebody is intent upon lessening the congestion so trying to automobilists, whose machines have not yet been stolen.

It is said that Governor Pinchot "is not entirely satisfied with the presidential plan for making enforcement more effective."

Important as may be the state of mind of Mr. Pinchot, it is safe to assume that the course of Mr. Coolidge was laid out solely with regard to other matters.

One of the crime mysteries never in any part solved is the murder of Mrs. Sudow in the suburbs of Los Angeles several years ago. Now appears a man to declare that he saw the commission of the crime, by women, and also saw the same women slay a second victim.

For some reason the authorities seem ready to listen to him. Perhaps they desire to test his sanity. Certainly his testimony in a capital case would be useless.

The owner of Papyrus, the horse recently defeated by the American horse, Zev, sends word from England that Papyrus would have won had he been in good condition.

Thus the affair is pleasant all around. The owner of Zev got the purse, and the other owner retains faith in his racer.

Lieutenant Moseley of the army recently flew from San Francisco to Los Angeles in three hours and twenty-three minutes. Evidently he was in a hurry to get to the south end of the state.

It is worth while to note that he was using an army plane with a Liberty motor. Also it is interesting to see American aviators making such records.

Rhineland as a republic seems logical enough geographically, but it is evident that it will have a hard time in being neighborly with Germany, as that term is understood generally.

Federal agents are to find out about sales of jewelry.

The public has curiosity on the subject, too. Every time a lady is deprived by wanton hands of a $25,000 brooch, people would be glad to know what the bauble cost. Not that it is any of their business.

Were Germany to ask the allies to interfere in the Ruhr, and they were to accept, they would face a very delicate task.

Probably the French would regard interference as bordering closely on a hostile act.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

"ONLY BENNIE"

"And have you seen Marie's Bennie? No? Well my dear, you don't want to. He's a perfect boor!"

"Really? Why I thought he was rather a nice sort of child! Of course he was very little, only six, when I last saw him."

"Hm! Well he isn't nice now. I was there for five days and in the whole of that time he never made a mistake and offered me a chair or opened a door or did the least thing to show that he knew I was alive. Not the slightest consideration for anybody. I must say I'm surprised at Marie! I thought she'd bring him up a little better than that."

But that was exactly the way Marie had brought him up; without consideration for others. She had never shown him any. When he was very little, and the friend who remembered him as a nice child of six had been visiting his mother, neither of them showed him much consideration.

He was curled up on the porch hammock looking at his book when they went toward it. "There's somebody in the hammock," whispered the visitor. "It's only Benny," said his mother and brushed him out of the hammock without a word. She would never have thought of doing that to anyone else! She would have murmured an excuse and slipped off to another corner.

He was sitting before the open window enjoying the breeze on his face and his mother swept across the room, tipped him out of the chair unceremoniously with "Here, let me sit there. You go somewhere else."

You see it was only Benny. Had it been anyone else she would have taken another chair or asked graciously for permission to offer another place quite as pleasant. As it was only Benny, she dumped him out.

Of course real manners are outgrowth of real character. If that were not so they would not matter so much as they do. But children cannot grasp the essentials of real character and must be trained toward developing it by little concrete stages of growth.

One gives him the formal mannerism, and life fills it in and makes it real for him as he grows to it. If the concrete stages we offer are crude to the point of savagery there isn't a doubt in the world but what he will adopt them as his own and that life will make them meaningful to him in his own way.

Children are close to savagery in many ways, conduct covering most of them. One cannot afford to miss any opportunity for instill a decent regard for himself and others into him as early as possible. Otherwise we'll have Marie's little boor.

WORKERS MUST REALLY WORK NOW IN SPAIN

[By Associated Press]

MADRID, Oct. 25.—The public pulse of Latin countries is beating true to form in Spain. The government has been overthrown by a coup d'etat, yet the excitement soon was over and today the mind of the crowd is busy as ever with its distractions and pleasures.

The cafes are crowded, and one can rarely find an empty seat at the outdoor tables. Bull fights are to the fore, and will continue to attract crowds until the weather breaks. A roulette table, it is rumored is to be installed at the Ice Palace by permission of the dictator, Primo Rivera, who is said to be not insensible to the attraction of the game. The well-to-do residents of Madrid have begun their exodus from San Sebastian, returning to the capital as fast as the limited train service can bring them.

Probably nothing has caused as much excited comment and speculation as the famous decree, the purpose of which is to make government employes do some work. It has been a veritable bombshell. It requires that all such men report at nine in the morning and be on duty until 2 in the afternoon. As a result the government buildings are overrun with strangers, stumbling over each other, asking where their offices are located, and when they find them, wondering what to do. A caricaturist suggests that concentration camps be established.

Thousands of government officials, in the enjoyment of a mere pittance, learned in the past how to reduce their output of energy to a minimum, often not exceeding the mere act of signing the monthly pay sheets. Thousands more by means of an occasional "act" of presence," as it is picturesquely called, in various departments managed to derive a multiplicity of incomes from as many sources. Under this system sinecures for the relatives of cabinet ministers, down to the most distant degree, were easy to obtain and by a series of compromises often maintained while the party was out of office. Room on every pay sheet was found for a host of party supporters.

One particular instance, much commented upon, is worth mentioning. The hero, a man known in his proper sphere of operations as a journalist plying a party pen, had recently progressed so rapidly in his departmental connections that he might, but for his dismissal, now be faced with the problem of daily attendance in 15 different offices, from all of which he drew an unearned salary. Another journalist's monthly pay had for many years been accounted for as "fodder for a mule."

The new decree has not spared those in high stations of life, and as a display of Draconian justice the initial act of Milan de Priego who, on taking over the duties of the home office, dismissed his own brother from a fine sinecure in the post office, calls for a tribute of respect. General Weyler's son has also lost a post believed to be especially lucrative.

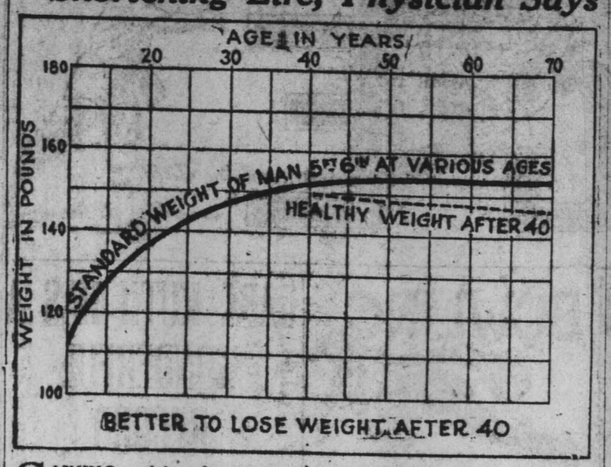
Gaining Weight After 40 Means Shortening Life, Physician Says



GAINING weight after the age of forty means decreasing the number of years the average man will live. Long life is a race in which the slim people have the best chance of winning.

These are the conclusions reached by Dr. Charles H. Willits, medical director of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, who has just completed a survey of the subject.

"It is safe to gain weight slowly up to about the age of forty but generally dangerous after that," Dr. Willits said. "The slim man, who has passed middle age is a far better risk than the person who is overweight. The records of our company and others prove this conclusively.

"Intelligent eating and exercising will prevent and reduce excess flesh and enable people to live longer. The average American eats far too much sugar, especially since prohibition, and too much fats and starches and does not move around enough.

"There is a popular belief that the heavy man is more able to withstand disease and is consequently to be envied. This is true for young people only. Fat men and women are subject to diabetes, pneumonia, and diseases of the heart, stomach and kidneys that kill so many people over forty."

The danger of excessive overweight is clearly shown by the following table based on data collected by forty-three American Life Insurance Companies over a period of twenty-seven years.

Death Rate Per 10,000 Persons Over 45 years of age.

CAUSES	Overweight 50 lbs.	Normal Weight
Apoplexy	39.7	21.2
Diabetes	13.6	2.8
Organic Heart Disease	38.4	19.9
Brights Disease	37.4	17.9

Dr. Willits takes no stock in the theory that either work or golf is harmful to a man who has passed his fiftieth or even sixtieth birthday if he does not over exert himself. He believes that the span of life will continue to lengthen until it will be a crime for a man to die under seventy-five.

TODD REALTY CO. SAYS GLENDALE AVE. IS COMER

The importance of the paving and electrification of Glendale ave. cannot be stressed enough to prospective purchasers of business property in Glendale.

The work of laying gas lines is being carried on rapidly prior to the starting of the work of actual paving. Material and equipment for the street work are now being assembled and within a few weeks actual construction will be under way.

There can be little doubt that with the completion of these improvements Glendale avenue will become one of the busy thoroughfares of the city. This street opens up a direct connection with Los Angeles and the whole northeast as well as eastern sections of Glendale, and it will be a direct outlet for the rapidly growing communities of Montrose, La Crescenta and the whole thriving valley to the north of Glendale.

The Todd Realty company, located at 130 South Glendale avenue, calls attention to the fact that three years ago there was hardly any traffic on the very bad pavement of Glendale avenue. Today, with the pavement 100 per cent worse, traffic has increased a thousand fold, so it is evident that with a paved boulevard and a car line, traffic and business will increase beyond the hopes of the most optimistic.

The wise real estate investor knows that values always rise highest along the streets carrying heavy traffic, as witness the startling increase along Colorado and San Fernando road.

"Keep an eye on Glendale avenue" is the advise offered to real estate investors in Glendale.

To the home-seekers, the east side of Glendale offers attractive possibilities with its higher elevations, continuous, unobstructed breeze and proximity to the new high school. Before buying, the home-seeker should investigate the eastern section of the city.

Curing your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

Dear Sir: Do you think there is any permanent benefit to be derived from indoor practice at home in putting? If so, will you be good enough to make a few suggestions as to how such practice can be made the most profitable?

J. F. D.

Answer: Beyond any doubt a player can greatly benefit his putting by practicing indoors. Of course he won't be able to exercise his judgment on selecting the proper line to the cup, since he must have a flat smooth surface. Neither can he expect to work out an idea of how fast or far the ball will travel from a stroke of given length and expect to apply it on a putting green. But he can do much to develop his stroke into an even smooth swing.

One basic principle of good putting is a smooth even stroke that keeps the putter low along the ground; that takes that club back deliberately and evenly without any jerk or hitch and that sends it on through after the ball. And here is one purpose which the player ought to follow. The putting stroke at its greatest is a short stroke, and there is a tendency on part of most players to subconsciously hurry it. So concentrate on making the swing along the above lines until it becomes habitual. Also fine practice can be had in acquiring a stance that will allow the player to comfortably keep his body in such a position that he will not sway in making the stroke. Moving the body as the ball is being hit, is a very common fault. These two tips, if observed in conscientious practice indoors are almost sure to yield improvement in the player's game on the putting greens.

During a sea voyage a severe storm arose and some Russian emigrants were lamenting and praying, their cries mingling with the roar of the waves.

As one of the men came staggering up, calling for help and deliverance, another, but calmer, Russian emigrant approached him and asked, "What is the matter brother? Why are you screaming so terribly?"

"Why shouldn't I scream," cried the frightened one, "when the ship is going down?"

"Well," said the other, "is it your ship?"

THURSDAY: CALLED ON MISS SYBIL STRAITLY LAST NIGHT. I MET HER RECENTLY AT A DANCE, AND TOLD HER I MIGHT CALL. SHE DIDN'T SEEM QUITE SO FULL OF CONVERSATION THIS TIME, AND I WAS AT A LOSS, TRYING TO FIND SOMETHING TO SAY.
AT LAST, WHEN THE TIME CAME WHEN I FELT I SHOULD GO, AND I HAPPENED TO REMARK: "DO YOU NOTICE HOW LONG THE NIGHTS ARE GETTING NOW?" —— SHE REPLIED:—
"OH, YES, IT SEEMS ALMOST A WEEK SINCE YOU FIRST CAME IN."

SPORT -O- GRAMS

By FRANCIS W. READ

WEIGHT STILL COUNTS IN FOOTBALL

There has been of late a decided tendency on the part of sport critics to depreciate the influence of weight in football. The increase in popularity of the open type of game, with the stress placed upon kicking and passing has been responsible for such a conclusion. The belief that weight now plays a negligible part in football has gained no little credence because of the fact that apparently the open type of game, so common of recent years, minimizes and almost obliterates the necessity for weight.

It is true that in purely open game, weight is not an essential to the team on the offensive. If it can kick and pass and play the open game to perfection while in possession of the ball, a team will not be greatly handicapped by lack of weight. But even the best of elevens has to play on the defensive occasionally, and here is where the weight is needed. Speed and skill at passing and kicking gains yardage, but it can never hold a line against a heavy plunging team unless it has plenty of beef to back it up. One of the defensive, weight is more than valuable, it is almost necessary. If a fast light team can keep the ball and play on the offensive at the open game all afternoon, then it is not handicapped by lack of weight. But if the ball is lost to the opposing eleven, as is bound to happen occasionally, lack of weight may cost the team the game.

It is true that if both teams are playing an open game, this difficulty would be minimized, but in nearly every football game one team has the slight advantage in the point of beef, and when they are both playing the open game the one that has the extra weight occupies the most advantageous position, for which an iron wall with plenty of beef behind it, they can prevent opposing players getting down to take a pass, and can stop an adversary from running back punts.

Then it must be considered that every team does not play the open game. Dozens of teams throughout the country still play straight football and a heavy team playing the straight game can walk right away from all opposition. The Stanford-Occidental game clearly demonstrated to local fans that weight is still a dominant feature in the gridiron sport.

NO UPSET IN DOPE

The defeat of the University of Southern California Trojans at the hands of the Eniversity of Washington last Saturday has been characterized generally as an upset in the dope. This depends upon what dope is meant. Dopesters here and in the bay region had it all figured out that there was nothing to the conference race this year but California and U. S. C., with the possible addition of Stanford. They did not so much as mention the northern teams. Washington scribes, however, thought differently. Saturday's results were not in the nature of an upset for their dope. The following is a typical effusion of a northwestern scribe early in the practice period:

"There is an entirely different spirit on the Seattle campus than has been displayed for years—the same old confident optimism that prevailed long ago when Doble's elevens were knocking them all cold. Washington's coaches, players and students are looking forward to a big season. They will be satisfield with nothing less than a coast championship, although they are slow to predict that they will get it. If they lose more than one game on their schedule it will, indeed, be a sad blow."

MEUSEL BROTHERS WILL PLAY SUNDAY IN GLENDALE UNIFORMS AT TOURNAMENT PARK, PASADENA

Major League Stars to Represent Glendale in Game With Pasadena Merchants; Arnold Statz, Lefty Thomas, Babe Herman, Carl Sawyer, and Other Luminaries Are on Team

Whoever expected to see the Meusel brothers in Glendale uniforms and whoever thought that Arnold Statz would play on a team representing the fastest growing city in America? Few indeed have had such expectations, but those who have visioned these baseball luminaries playing for Glendale will see their dreams fulfilled on Sunday at Tournament Park, Pasadena. Playing under the Glendale banner, a team composed of stars from the big league ball teams will meet the Pasadena Merchants at Tournament Park Sunday.

The Meusel brothers, Bob and Irish, Mike Donlin, formerly of the New York Giants, Arnold Statz, who proved a sensation with the Los Angeles coast league team some time ago, and was recently star of the Chicago Cubs, will perform on the Glendale team. Babe Herman, former Glendale High player, now the property of the Boston Red Sox, Carl Sawyer of the Vernon Tigers, Heinie Sands and Mike O'Brien of Philadelphia, Hollis Thurston of the Chicago White Sox, and Lefty Thomas, hurler of the Angels, complete the squad.

Such a galaxy of horsehide artists should be enough to submerge any team on earth, or at least this part of the earth,. They should hand the Pasadena Merchants a defeat by all indications, but even big leaguers drop games occasionally.

Because of the ruling of the baseball commission prohibiting them to play after November 10, these men will participate in only a few game while in the west. Glendale is the first city to be represented by them.

Mayor Spencer Robinson will be on hand to present the Meusel boys with the key of Glendale. President Jesse Smith of the Chamber of Commerce is co-operating in arranging the game, and all of the civic organizations of the city are giving it their support.

Because Glendale has not at this time a park that will accommodate the crowd, the game will be staged at Tournament park, Pasadena. Frank Kerwin, who is behind the affair, estimates that between 8 and 10 thousand persons will see the contest.

This is the first time that many of these stars have played ball in the west and fans will flock to see them. The Meusel brothers will be the biggest drawing cards, as they were on the opposing teams in the recent World's series, and both put up excellent exhibitions of the national pastime. Herman is a local boy, and for that reason should prove quite popular with the bugs. He played first base for the Glendale High school team for three years. Later he performed with a club in Canada, and was purchased by the Detroit Tigers, who recently sold him to the Boston Red Sox.

MIDGET GRIDDERS TAKE ON CITRUS HI ELEVEN TODAY

Coach Paul Butterfield took his Glendale high school lightweight gridders to Azusa this afternoon to meet the Citrus babes in the second game of the Central league lightweight schedule.

After banding the South Pasadena Tiger Cubs a defeat last week, Butterfield's charges are all primed to take Citrus down the line. They have been going in great style in their early games, and are favored to cop today's encounter.

ATHLETIC CLUB BASKETBALLERS PLAY BANKERS

Glendale Athletic club's basketball team will make its initial appearance tomorrow evening when it meets the First National Bank casaba chasers at the High school gym. The Bankers are a fast outfit, but Captain Ole Jensen of the Athletics says that his team is going in great style and is in shape to take on any team in Southern California. According to Ole, basketball is the fastest of all sports, as speed, strength and brains are all demanded at the same instant.

Coach Normal Hayhurst of the High school, who is in charge of the City Basketball League, states that he has eight fast teams already entered in the circuit.

SAGEHENS TAKE ON THE BULLDOGS SATURDAY

Coach Cecil Cushman and his bunch of Bulldogs at Redlands University will have their hands full when Eugene Nixon and some twenty-five Pomona College gridiron athletes, mad clear through, invade Redlands with the definite objective in view of wiping up the ground with a lot of nice Doggies. The Sagehens were rather stunned and disgusted after their game with Caltech last week, but Coaches Nixon and Heath were so hot under the collar they couldn't even speak to each other until Monday afternoon. Consequently the Claremont team now has something of the spirit of the coaches, injected with several scathing talks.

On paper the Sagehens should win Saturdays' clash, and if they don't the citizens of Claremont are considering founding a new institution for the incompetent. The Claremont team dropped their game with Caltech merely through lack of thoroughness in their playing. They had the plays and the drive to win, but made a little early Christmas present of the clash to "Fox" Stanton. The Pomona coach threatens to make several changes in his lineup unless things worth better in the future.

Things have been running none too well at Redlands. Casting around for a logical reason, the absence of Capt. Kemper Taylor from his old position at quarter probably has a lot to do with it. Taylor has been unable to play more than five minutes this year and as a result the team has no general. Sandy McGilbra, the Oklahoma Indian, does fairly well with the team, but he doesn't know the other conference elevens as Taylor does. If the Redlands skipper is able to get into Saturday's clash the Sagehens will undoubtedly have their hands full.

The Bulldogs are not the nice little docile playmates one would think after hearing of the 33 to 0 defeat administered by Oxy. The Redlands team didn't look so bad for the first half, and then injuries broke up the maroon-and-gray combination. Coach Cushman has seven veterans and they should make things fairly steady against the Pomona outfit.

Last year Pomona thumped the Bulldogs, 33 to 0, in a game played at Claremont in a driving rain. Two years ago the Redlands crew upset all previous traditions and beat the Sagehens 17 to 7, it being the first time in the history of the institution such a thing had happened.

LITTLE SERIES IS STILL GOING IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 25.—Before a handful of spectators who shivered in the cold breezes of Chesapeake Bay, the Baltimore Orioles again came from behind and swamped the Kansas City Blues in the eighth game of the "little world series." The score was 9 to 5.

The series, which started almost two weeks ago, now stands at four games each, and it looks as if the Orioles have enough steam to win out in the final contest today.

BABE RUTH HAS A WONDERFUL RECORD

Bambino Has Remarkable Success During the Past Season

[By Associated Press]

NEW YORK. Oct. 25.—An analysis of the batting performances of Babe Ruth this season discloses that the big slugger compiled one of the most remarkable, if not the greatest record in major league history. This is despite the fact that he failed to lead the American league hitters and was only able to tie Cy Williams of the Phillies for the home run leadership with 41 circuit blows, 18 behind the world's record he set in 1921.

The complete record of the Babe, however, and the story of his versatile greatness—the work that earned him the crown of the most valuable American league player, show him as the big star of the year.

Unofficial records of the 1923 season show that Ruth participated in the entire schedule of the Yankees' 152 games, a record in itself for Ruth. These figures also show that he was at bat 520 official times; that he scored 151 runs and made 205 safe hits, giving him a batting average of .394.

Another phase of Ruth's work as a batsman which undoubtedly created a new major league record was the number of times he reached first base during the 1923 season. In addition to his 205 hits and his 171 passes there were other times when he got on either by forcing a runner to a fielder's choice by being hit by a pitched ball or through an error. Their total shows that Ruth reached first base a fraction under three times for each of the 152 games during the season.

GLENDALE HIGH TO MEET CITRUS SQUAD TOMORROW

Dynamiters Play Lemons in First Home Game of Schedule

After defeating the South Pasadena Tigers 26 to 0 last week, the Glendale high school footballers will take on the Citrus Lemons on the local gridiron tomorrow. This is the second league game of the season for the Dynamiters and the first to be played on the home field.

Few expect anything but a Glendale victory out of the affair, while many are already predicting a championship for the Red and Black eleven. The team is in the finest of spirits, having won all of its practice games by good scores and come out victorious in the first league encounter. The only team to score on the locals was the Franklin eleven. A safety gave the Kiteflyers two points.

Coach Hayhurst has been injecting oodles and gobs of pep into his charges this week, and they should be in first class shape for the game. Citrus lost to Alhambra in the first game last Friday, and is attempting to recuperate sufficiently this week to stage a comeback and best Glendale.

Spirit is running high at the local school. The Red and Black rooters have displayed some real pep at the last few games, and are planning to stage a real rooting stunt at tomorrow's game. That the stands will be filled there is no doubt, for the Glendale team this year is of such high calibre that it is attracting attention all over Southern California.

Coach Hayhurst will probably use the following lineup in the heavyweight struggle tomorrow afternoon: Lavelle, left end; Dodson, left tackle; Morrison, left guard; Zaun, center; Brucker, right guard; Phillips, right tackle; Horri, right end; Bud Elliott, quarter; Ryan, left half; West, right half; H. Elliott, full.

TROJANS READY TO MEET CARDS ON SATURDAY

"Forget Washington and get Stanford."

That's the spirit Coach Elmer Henderson is attempting to inject into its University of Southern California eleven. The Trojans are trying hard to forget that licking the Huskies handed them, but by the way they talk and the way they act it is easy to discern Coach Bagshaw's behemoths still hold an uppermost place in their minds. Unless the Trojans "come out of it" before Saturday Stanford will trim them as sure as Washington did.

A negro called upon an old friend who received him in a rocking chair. The visitor observed not only that his host did not rise, but that he continued to rock himself to and fro in a most curious way.

"Yo' ain't sick, is yo', Harrison?" asked the caller, anxiously.

"No, I ain't sick, Mose," said Harrison.

There was a moment's silence, during which the caller gazed wide-eyed at the rocking figure.

"Den," continued Mose, "why does yo' rock yo'self dat way all de time?"

Harrison explained:

"Yo' know Bill Blott? Well, he sold me a silver watch cheap, an' if I stops moving like dis dat watch don't go."

TRILBY

Two or three times he took her and Marta for a drive.

On one of these occasions, as they went down Charlotte Street, she saw a shop with transparent French blinds in the window, and through them some French women, with neat white caps, ironing. It was a French blanchisserie de fin, and the sight of it interested and excited her so much that she must needs insist on being put down and on going into it.

"Je voudrais bien parler a la patronne, si ca ne la derange pas," she said.

The patronne, a genial Parisian, was much astonished to hear a great French lady, in costly garments, evidently a person of fashion and importance, applying to her rather humbly for employment in the business, and showing a thorough knowledge of the work (and of the Parisian work-woman's colloquial dialect). Marta managed to catch the patronne's eye, and tapped her own forehead significantly, and Sir Oliver nodded. So the good woman humored the great lady's fancy, and promised her abundance of employment whenever she should want it.

Employment! Poor Trilby was hardly strong enough to walk back to the carriage; and this was her last outing.

But this little adventure had filled her with hope and good spirits—for she had as yet received no answer from Angele Boisse (who was in Marseilles), and had begun to realise how dreary the quartier latin would be without Jeannot, without Angele, without the trois Angliches in the Place St. Anatole des Arts.

She was not allowed to see any of the strangers who came and made kind inquiries. This her doctors had strictly forbidden. Any reference to music or singing irritated her beyond measure. She would say to Marta, in bad German:

"Tell them, Marta—what nonsense it is! They are taking me for another—they are mad. They are trying to make a fool of me!"

And Marta would betray great uneasiness—almost terror—when she was appealed to in this way.

PART EIGHTH

Svengali had died from heart-disease. The cut he had received from Gecko had not apparently (as far as the verdict of a coroner's inquest could be trusted) had any effect in aggravating his malady or hastening his death.

But Gecko was sent for trial at the Old Bailey, and sentenced to hard labor for six months (a sentence which, if I remember aright, gave rise to much comment at the time). Taffy saw him again, but with no better result than before. He chose to preserve an obstinate silence on his relations with the Svengalis and their relations with each other.

When he was told how hopelessly ill and insane Madame Svengali was, he shed a few tears, and said: "Ah, pauvrette, pauvrette—ah, monsieur—ja l'aimais tant, je l'aimais tant! il n'y en a pas beaucoup comme elle, Dieu de misere! C'est un ange du Paradis!"

And not another word was to be got out of him.

It took some time to settle Svengali's affairs after his death. No will was found. His old mother came over from Germany, and two of his sisters, but no wife. The comic wife and the three children, and the sweet-stuff shop in Elberfeld, had been humorous inventions of his own—a kind of Mrs. Harris!

He left three thousand pounds, every penny of which (and of far larger sums that he had spent) had been earned by "la Svengali," but nothing came to Trilby of this; nothing but the clothes and jewels he had given her, and in this respect he had been lavish enough; and there were countless costly gifts from emperors, kings, great people of all kinds. Trilby was under the impression that all these belonged to Marta. Marta behaved admirably; she seemed bound hand and foot to Trilby by a kind of slavish adoration, as that of a plain old mother for a brilliant and beautiful but dying child.

It soon became evident that, whatever her disease might be, Trilby had but a very short time to live.

She was soon too weak even to be taken out in a Bath-chair, and remained all day in her large sitting-room with Marta; and there, to her great and only joy, she received her three old friends every afternoon, and gave them coffee, and made them smoke cigarettes of caporal as of old; and their hearts were daily harrowed as they watched her rapid decline.

Day by day she grew more beautiful in their eyes, in spite of her increasing pallor and emaciation—her skin was so pure and white and delicate, and the bones of her face so admirable!

Her eyes recovered all their old humorous brightness when les trois Angliches were with her, and the expression of her face was so wistful and tender for all her playfulness, so full of eager clinging to existence and to them, that they felt the memory of it would haunt them forever, and be the sweetest and saddest memory of their lives.

One day she was deeply moved at receiving a visit from Mrs. Bagot, who, at Little Billee's earnest desire, had come all the way from Devonshire to see her.

As the graceful little lady came in, pale and trembling all over, Trilby rose from her chair to receive her, and rather timidly put out her hand, and smiled in a frightened manner. Neither could speak for a second. Mrs. Bagot stood stock-still by the door gazing (with all her heart in her eyes) at the so terribly altered Trilby—the girl she had once so dreaded.

Trilby, who seemed also bereft of motion, and whose face and lips were ashen, exclaimed, "I'm afraid I haven't quite kept my promise to you, after all! but things have turned out so differently! anyhow, you needn't have any fear of me now."

At the mere sound of that voice, Mrs. Bagot, who was as impulsive, emotional, and unregulated as her son, rushed forward, crying, "Oh, my poor girl, my poor girl!" and caught her in her arms, and kissed and caressed her, and burst into a flood of tears, and forced her back into her chair, hugging her as if she were a long-lost child.

"I love you now as much as I always admired you—pray believe it!"

"Oh, how kind of you to say that!" said Trilby, her own eyes filling. "I'm not at all the dangerous or designing person you thought. I knew quite well I wasn't a proper person to marry your son all the time; and told him so again and again. It was very stupid of me to say yes at last. I was miserable directly after, I assure you. Somehow I couldn't help myself — I was driven."

"Oh, don't talk of that! don't talk of that! You've never been to blame in any way—I've long known it—I've been full of remorse! You've been in my thoughts always, night and day. Forgive a poor jealous mother. As if any man could help loving you—or any woman either. Forgive me!"

"Oh, Mrs. Bagot—forgive you! What a funny idea! But, anyhow, you've forgiven me, and that's all I care for now. I was very fond of your son—as fond as could be. I am now, but in quite a different sort of way, you know—the sort of way you must be, I fancy! There was never another like him that I ever met—anywhere! You must be so proud of him; who wouldn't? Nobody's good enough for him. I would have been only too glad to be his servant, his humble servant! I used to tell him so—but he wouldn't hear of it—he was much too kind! He always thought of others before himself. And, oh! how rich and famous he's become! I've heard all about it, and it did me good. It does me more good to think of than anything else; far more than if I were to be ever so rich and famous myself, I can tell you!"

This from la Svengali, whose overpowering fame, so utterly forgotten by herself, was still ringing all over Europe; whose lamentable illness and approaching death were being mourned and discussed and commented upon in every capital of the civilized world, as one distressing bulletin appeared after another. She might have been a royal personage!

Mrs. Bagot knew, of course, the strange form her insanity had taken, and made no allusion to the flood of thoughts that rushed through her own brain as she listened to this towering goddess of song, this poor mad queen of the nightingales, humbly gloating over her son's success. . . .

Poor Mrs. Bagot had just come from Little Billee's in Fitzroy Square, close by. There she had seen Taffy, in a corner of Little Billee's studio, laboriously answering endless letters and telegrams from all parts of Europe—for the good Taffy had constituted himself Trilby's secretary and homme d'affaires—unknown to her, of course. And this was no sinecure (though he liked it): putting aside the numerous people he had to see and be interviewed by, there were kind inquiries and messages of condolence and sympathy from nearly all the crown heads of Europe, through their chamberlains; applications for help from unsuccessful musical strugglers all over the world to the preeminently successful one; beautiful letters from great and famous people, musical or otherwise; disinterested offers of service; interested proposals for engagements when the present trouble should be over; beggings for an interview from famous impresarios, to obtain which no distance would be thought too great, etc., etc., etc. It was endless, in English, French, German, Italian—in languages quite incomprehensible (many letters had to remain unanswered)—Taffy took an almost malicious pleasure in explaining all this to Mrs. Bagot.

Then there was a constant rolling of carriages up to the door, and a thundering of Little Billee's knocker: Lord and Lady Palmerston wish to know—the Lord Chief Justice wishes to know—the Dean of Westminister wishes to know—the Marchioness of Westminister wishes to know—everybody wishes to know if there is any better news of Madame Svengali!

Day by day she grew more beautiful in their eyes, in spite of her increasing pallor.

These were small things, truly; but Mrs. Bagot was a small person from a small village in Devonshire, and one whose heart and eye had hitherto been filled by no larger image than that of Little Billee; and Little Billee's fame, as she now discovered for the first time, did not quite fill the entire universe.

And she mustn't be too much blamed if all these obvious signs of a world-wide colossal celebrity impressed and even awed her a little.

Madame Svengali! Why, this was the beautiful girl whom she remembered so well, whom she had so grandly discarded with a word, and who had accepted her conge so meekly in a minute; whom, indeed, she had been cursing in her heart for years, because—because what?

Poor Mrs. Bagot felt herself turn hot and red all over, and humbled herself to the very dust, and almost forgot that she had been in the right, after all, and that "la grande Trilby" was certainly no fit match for her son!

So she went quite humbly to see Trilby, and found a poor, pathetic, mad creature still more humble than herself, who still apologized for—for what?

A poor, pathetic, mad creature who had clean forgotten that she was the greatest singer in all the world—one of the greatest artists that had ever lived; but who remembered with shame and contrition that she had once taken the liberty of yielding (after endless pressure and repeated disinterested refusals of her own, and out of sheer irresistible affection) to the passionate pleadings of a little obscure art student, a mere boy—no better off than herself—just as penniless and insignificant a nobody; but—the son of Mrs. Bagot.

All due sense of proportion died out of the poor lady as she remembered and realized all this!

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer that if a full pint bottle of Allenrhu, the sure conquerer of rheumatism, does not show the way to stop the agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenrhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed druggists to guarantee it as above in every instance. EAGLE ROCK LADY PLEADS FOR CANINES

Approves Statement That Kindness to Animals Pays

Mrs. Frank J. Benneson of 2033 Park Avenue, Eagle Rock, owner of Bonnie Laddie, one of the screen's intelligent and beautiful collies, write the Daily Press as follows: "May I not add my approval of the methods of Lawrence Trimble regarding the training of screen dogs. Never in all my experience, however, in working with many directors of pictures have I had any cruelty shown in any manner to 'Bonnie Laddie.' In fact, I would not stay on any set one moment if any bad or cruel methods should be shown him.

"I also agree with Mr. Trimble that one can do everything with any dog or animal through love, patience and appealing to the best of his dog nature. 'Bonnie Laddie' is a perfect sample of what love can bring out, which his many friends in Glendale and Eagle Rock can prove, and where he has appeared on the stage showing how quickly he responds to every word. I am a member of the Glendale Dog Protective association and will help uphold the splendid work that is being done to curb cruelty in every form to these faithful dumb animals, man's best friends."

BABSON TALKS ON COLLECTIONS AND BUSINESS

It is not so much the amount of blood in our bodies that counts; it's the rate of circulation. It is not the amount of money in business which is most important; it's the rate of turn-over. There is always about so much money in the country. In good times and bad the actual amount of currency fluctuates relatively little. The great difference between brisk and dull business conditions is the rate at which money changes hands. One dollar used twice develops the same amount of business as two dollars used once. If we want a healthy, strong business situation then we must do what we can to keep money circulating!

Apparently, however, business men do not realize this fact. Whenever a period of uncertainty appears, every one, whether he can pay or not, tends to hold on to his money and let his bills go. This is true in presidential years or when a radical change in congress is in prospect. People seem to cling to their cash balances as though they held some saving grace to ward off trouble. I have before me Bradstreet's report on collection conditions in 46 leading cities in the United States and Canada. In only 2 of these 46 cities are collections reported as "good." In 29 cities they are only "fair," while in 15 cities they are given as "slow" or "poor!" Moreover, our studies of the other smaller cities show about the same condition.

This wave of slow paying is caused by the feeling of uncertainty regarding the outlook, but its effect on business is to make a certainty of very much worse conditions than otherwise would occur! The life blood of business is clogged. To have collections slowed down 25 per cent is exactly the same as sending a fourth of our money and credit out of the country. When the outlook is dubious it may be good judgment to curtail buying. The banks respect a buyer for being cautious. Unpaid bills, however, are another matter. They must be paid sometime. To delay simply frightens lenders, injures credit and takes the heart out of those who would put their money and energy into making business conditions better.

This letter is not directed to any particular industry or locality. If the habit of slow payment existed only in one section the effect would not be so serious. It is a general condition, and until it is corrected no amount of advertising or sales effort can offset its effect. Economists are figuring how much the airplane postal service will increase the efficiency of money. Most business men today, however, feel that a check "by return mail" would be fast enough. If checks were mailed this Thursday morning for only 20 per cent of the unpaid bills over 10 days old, the potential buying power of the country would be increased at least $1,000,000,000 by next Saturday night! Do you know of any quicker way to speed up business than that? Why not try it?

The difficulty is that every one is waiting for somebody else to start. In explaing slow payments, each gives as the reason that his own collections are slow. Why not each of us start a campaign all by himself? Even if we have to borrow money to do it, pay up our account quickly and urge the one we pay to pass the favor along in the interest of better business. "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you" is not only Scripture, but good business practice. In this case it will serve more than anything else to start business moving.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

A TOAST TO MERRIMENT

What tonic is there in a frown?
You may go up and I go down,
Or I go up and you—who knows
The way that either of us goes?
Make merry! Here's a laugh, for when
We part we may not meet again.

Make merry! What of frets and fears?
There is no happiness in tears.
You tremble at the cloud and lo!
'Tis gone—and so 'tis with our woe.
Full half of it but fancied ills.
Make merry! 'Tis the gloom that kills.

Make merry! There is sunshine yet,
The gloom that promised, let's forget,
The quip and jest are on the wing,
Why sorrow when we ought to sing?
Refill the cup of joy, for then
We part and may not meet again.

A smile, a jest, a joke—alas!
We come, we wonder, and we pass.
The shadows fall; so long we rest
In graves, where is no quip or jest.
Good day! Good cheer! Good-bye! For then
We part and may not meet again!

Talented Author Is Miss Bradley King

The combination that spells sure-fire success is—Youth, Enthusiasm, and Talent. Bradley King, brilliant scenario writer at the Thomas H. Ince studio, and author of "Her Reputation," has them all in the nth. degree. To the "lucky three" Miss King adds another—hard work.

For a young woman she has an amazing number of screen successes to her name. "What A Wife Learned," "A Man of Action," and "Her Reputation," this last in collaboration with Talbot Mundy—all bear her signature.

There are any number of envious people sighing, "If I were King," for Miss King's most recent big contribution to the screen is an adaptation of "Anna Christie," Eugene O'Neill's stage play which is now enjoying a sensational run in London after a big season in New York.

"Her Reputation," starring May McAvoy, with Lloyd Hughes heading a fine supporting cast, is now running at the T. D. & L. theater. Also five great acts of good vodvil by Althea Lucas & Co., Bond Morse, Chapman and Ring, Allen and Morse, Blanchon.

"Last Minute Louise" Justifies Nickname

"Last-Minute Louise."

Perhaps such a sobriquet may not be the most dignified that could be bestowed upon so famous a comedienne as Louise Dresser, but she did it herself.

A few months ago Miss Dresser returned to her Los Angeles home after an extensive vaudeville tour. She contemplated a rest. Two days after her arrival she was induced to sign a contract to appear in a series of pictures. When she had fulfilled this agreement, she again planned a vacation.

The next day she received a long distance telephone call from San Mateo, where "The Fog," now at the Glendale theater, was being filmed for Metro, under the personal supervision of Max Graf.

"Miss Dresser, this is Max Graf talking. Are you engaged? No? Well, I must have you for a role in 'The Fog.' And we start shooting tomorrow. You will need three evening gowns, one opera coat, one riding habit and four street dresses. Can you make it?"

"Dust out my dressing room," responded the lady in question, noting that it was one o'clock by her wrist watch.

"Oh, I'm used to the last-minute rush," Miss Dresser explains. "In nearly every stage production I have had my part thrust upon me at the very last moment. They ought to call me 'Last-Minute Louise.'"

Two Dozen Plumes Used in Pola's Fan

Two dozen ostrich plumes, some trailing the ground, were used in making a beautiful and unique fan, carried by Pola Negri in a scene for the Paramount picture, "The Cheat," in which she stars, and which will be on view at the Gateway theater today.

This fan is made so that one end is composed of short plumes, while the others slops downward till the other extreme is reached. They are of a rich brown hue to match the brown velvet gown of fantastic design, with gold cloth aplique and collar.

The three hundred minor players, all in Oriental garb, carry Chinese lanterns of special color and design, each with an incandescent light inside. Jack Holt is featured as leading man and Charles de Roche supports Miss Negri in this fine production. The fete scene shows the star auctioning a kiss for charity. De Roche bids $10,000 for the kiss and wins. Then Jack Holt, as the husband of the star, enters and things start that are not down on the program.

HER LOVE FOR CHILDREN NEVER LEFT KATY WALSH

BOSTON, Oct. 25.—A charwoman's devotion to children has been revealed through the receipt by the treasurer of the Children's hospital of this city of her bequest of $1,400 to make the lives of unfortunate little ones a bit easier.

Kate Lucy Walsh lost all three of her own children when they were young. Thereafter she devoted her life to making other women's children happier, and in many a household where she was employed her hearty laugh and cheerful outlook on life dispelled momentary clouds.

Mrs. Walsh was more than 70 years of age when she succumbed to pneumonia. Her will made the Children's hospital her sole legatee and the executors found that her savings from a life of hard work amounted to the sum which has been turned over to the hospital. Above a little bed in the hospital will be placed a tablet bearing her name.

WAR VETERANS' EXEMPTIONS TOTAL MANY MILLIONS

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 24.—Tax exemptions totaling $44,410,063 were granted to 80,430 California war veterans for the tax year of 1923-24, according to a statement made public today by M. D. Lack, secretary of the state board of equalization.

Lack says the average exemption per veteran is $552, although the law allows veterans a maximum exemption of $1000 on personal and real property.
